Objectives:

This lecture was planned to make awareness about Research & Development during the education and in Industry. When research comes to the pharmaceutical research industry, R&D services not only generates income for the companies involved in the research but it also brings results in lives being saved, or at least enhancement in patient's lives.

Outcomes:

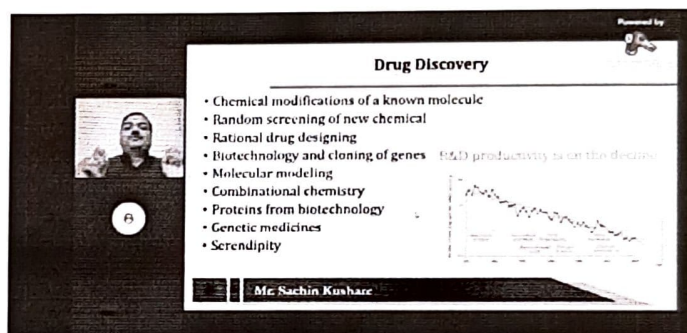

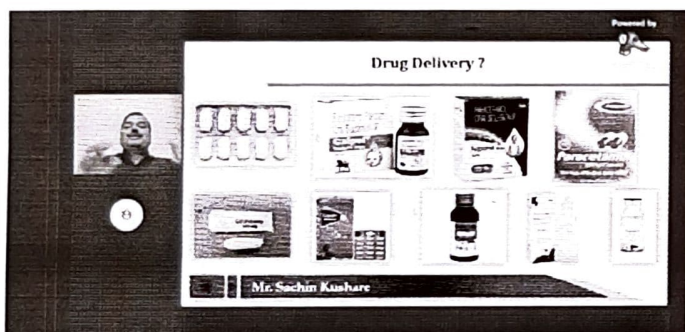

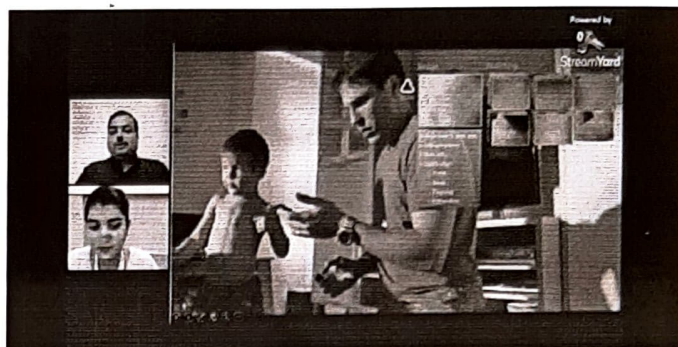

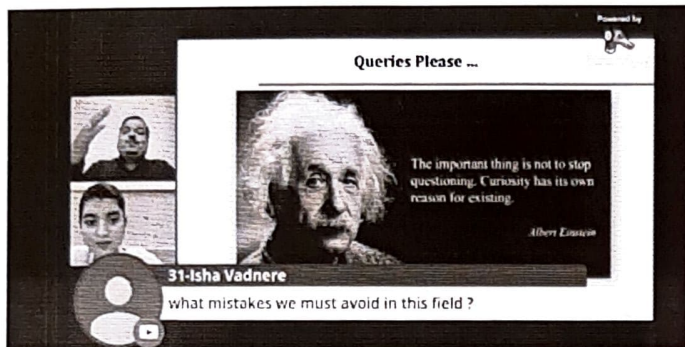

Students and staff came to know about importance of research and development in manufacturing procedures, quality control measures being taken, production scope and technical know-how in the industry.

Key Highlights of the Lecture:

Mr.Sachin Kushare focused to develop research attitude among the students by taking industrial problems associated with the various formulation.He guided about new era of medicine where breakthrough science is transforming care and our approach to treating patients. Good quality research and development (R&D) is crucial to the long-term success of the pharmaceutical industry and more generally, the wider life-sciences sector, but acquiring adequate funding is often viewed as a challenge, particularly at the feasibility or concept stage of R&D.
